Blue Suits for Men and Young Men.

you pay attention whatever to the style preferences of well-dressed men, you'll discover the fact that a large percentage of them are wearing blue suits. We have always made our special Hart Schaffner & Marx "Blues" a leading feature. Serge is naturally the leading fabric, but there is a variety of weavessome hard-twisted; some very soft and silky; some very fine, narrow wale; some wide wale. Some are plain; some are made with self stripes, and this leads to many pleasing variations in pattern. Then you get three or four shades of blue, and some of the fabrics are decorated with white hairline stripes.

The models are various; every good style in single and double breasted for men and young men; silk-lined suits among them.

$18.00 to $35.00 each. Special for the Man With $15.00.

Here's a particularly strong line of worsted and cassimere suits, in fancy weaves and plain blue serge, for which you generally have to pay much more. We make a feature of them at $15.00.

Unusual values in Fine Trousers for dress and business wear. Also outing, golf, and tennis-$1.50 to $10.00 a pair.

Cravenetted Rain Coats.

One of the most convenient and useful garments of a man's outfit. Intended originally as a protection from the rain, it is now quite as freely used as a light-weight overcoat. We are showing a complete new line for rain or sunshine. Plain black, oxford gray, and neat fancy cloths; conservative and extreme styles.

MISS DREXEL NOW LADY MAIDSTONE

Beautiful American Heiress Weds British Viscount.

London, June 8.-The wedding of Miss Margaretta Drexel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, of Grosvenor Square and Philadelphia, to Viscount Maldstone, elder son of the Earl of Winchilsea and Nottingham, took place this afternoon at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. The Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram, Bishop of London, performed the ceremony, assisted by the rector of St. Margaret's Church, Canon Hensley Henson, and several other clergymen.

The church, which was lavishly decorated with white flowers and tall palms, was crowded when the ceremony began at 2:15 this afternoon. There had been some talk of making the wedding a quiet affair, owing to the recent death of King Edward, but King George made it known that it was his desire that the arrangements should not be interfered with by the court mourning more than could be

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her away, Her wedding dress was of white satin, the skirt arranged with a panel of old lace, while an old lace scarf was draped from one shoulder. The full court train. which fell from the shoulder, was composed of gold brocade and she wore a sort of double veil, lace at the back and tulle over the face. The lace on her dress and the veil were of interest, because the bride's mother, her grandmother, and her great-aunt all wore them at their weddings. There were eleven bridesmaids, including three American girls. They were the bridegroom's sister, Lady Gladys Finch Hatton; the bridegroom's two cousins, the Hon. Hilda Chichester and Miss Essex Gunning; Miss Mildred Carter, daughter of the American Minister to the Balkan States, who is soon to marry Lord Acheson; Miss Nellie Post, who is to marry Montague Eliot, and Miss Edith Wayne, of Philadelphia; Lady Violet Mannes, the Hon. Margaret Upton, the Hon. Syb! Fellowes, the Hon, Rhoda Astley, and Miss Constance Coombe. They were all dressed alike in simple costumes of soft white satin, and instead of hats, wore wreaths of marguerites and tulle veils.

The Hon. Charles Mills, son of Lord Hallingdon, acted as best man, Despite the King's edict that half mourning might be worn, most of the women wore black, relieved by bunches of flowers at the waist.

Mrs. Reid, the wife of the American Ambassador, and Mrs. Roosevelt were It was agreed by all that Miss Drexel was the most beautiful bride London has seen for a long time.

There was a tremendous crowd outside the church. It included many men, who pushed and shoved in an effort to get a view of the bridal party. The guests took huge bunches from floral decorations as they were leaving the church. After the ceremony Mrs. Drexel entertained the large party of wedding guests at her fine home in Grosvenor After the reception the bride

The bodice, embroidered with roses, was studded with brilliants, and the whole was velled with the chantilly lace. She wore a veil of tulle held with orange blossems and carried a shower of Bride roses and orchids. The maid of honor wore rose-colored satin with gold span-gles set in the skirt and bodice, the whole costume veiled with pink chiffon. She carried pink roses. The bridesmaids wore gowns of the same material as that of the maid of honor and carried sheaths of maiden-hair ferns. Mrs. Alexander, other of the bride, wore pale blue satin irlmmed with silver, bodice embroidere with roses. After the supper the bride and oridegroom left for an extended wedding rip, the bride wearing a gown of French blue rajah made in a coat suit and trimmed with a darker shade of blue velvet. She wore a small close-fitting tur-ban of the French style, in the same shades. Their future home will be in Miami, Fla. The bride's gifts to her maids were exceptionally handsome and interesting.
